BEFORE • AFTER

Like Manila Country Club, this private club and its three 9-hole Alpha, Bravo and Charley courses, as well as a par-3 executive layout, receive heavy play. With each 9-hole course closing for six months at a time, all three nines were almost completely rebuilt from tees to greens, including infrastructure and features such as bunkers, cart paths and bridges, up to and including a new lightning warning system. The course's numerous water features were de-silted to improve quality and create wetlands, and drainage systems were greatly improved. The greens were also re-surfaced with Paspalum Sea Isle Supreme to better tolerate the course's effluent water supply.

From the beginning of the renovation project in September 2006 to its completion in April 2008, the club's membership rose by 27 percent, from 7,484 members to 9,566.

BY THE NUMBERS

Renovation timeline: October 2006-April 2008

Number of holes involved: 27

Budget: $13.1 million

Line items: 10,705 meters of sub-soil drainage installed in green sites

What the judges said:

*"This was a very sweeping renovation that completely repositioned the course. I like the environmental emphasis that showed the plants and wildlife associated with the course" —Rick Robbins

*"A very good renovation that allowed for updating a facility to existing standards" —Tommy Sasser

*"Big increase in membership sales, big budget, great club – I want to join!" —Joe Niebur
